Are to deliver training to Equinor for at least five new years

- A responsibility we take very seriously, says Trond Løfqvist in Trainor. The ed-tech company has signed a new framework agreement with Equinor

Several decades have passed since Trainor first provided training to former Statoil, now Equinor. Since then, several thousand Equinor employees have received their necessary safety training via Trainor every year. And they will continue to do so for at least another five years, after the companies entered into a new framework agreement on safety training within electrical and automation.

The framework agreement runs for five years, with an option for 2 periods of two years and includes training, practical exercises and digital courses for regulations, standards and norms for electrical installations, installation and maintenance of electrical equipment in potentially explosive areas.

A long term relationship

- Equinor is well familiar with Trainor and knows that we deliver quality, says Trond. He emphasizes that framework agreements with large companies such as Equinor give the company predictability and the opportunity to invest in technological solutions and learning methods, the investments needed to achieve the company vision of "setting a new standard for safety training".

- Our professionals are among the country's leading experts in electrical safety, course instructors who love to convey professional expertise. And we create ground-breaking e-learning that makes vital knowledge more accessible, says Trond Løfqvist.

Trainor is an internationally recognized EdTech company setting new standards for safety training. We provide training services, digital solutions and technical consultancy services to offshore, maritime and land-based industries worldwide.
