Trainor strengthens its position in maritime and offshore industries as Apave acquires OComp

Apave Group's acquisition of OComp marks an important step toward building a leading Northern European competence environment within safety and technical training. For Trainor, this development creates an even stronger combined offering for industries operating under high regulatory demands and complex conditions.

OComp has quickly established itself as a key provider of training within maritime, offshore and aquaculture in Norway, known for strong subject-matter expertise, operational agility and wide geographical presence. Combined with Trainor's deep competence in electrical safety and digital learning, this creates a robust and comprehensive training ecosystem – from critical offshore safety courses to advanced e-learning and technical upskilling across the industrial landscape.

“Apave's acquisition of OComp strengthens the entire Group's capabilities in Norway. For Trainor, it means we can deliver even more integrated and future-ready learning solutions together with OComp to companies operating in challenging environments. We look forward to combining OComp's operational excellence and maritime specialisation with our technology, learning platforms and safety expertise,” says Stian Martinsen, Trainor CEO and Director of Apave Nordics Region.

With OComp's strong position in Bergen – one of the world's most important hubs for maritime and offshore operations – and Trainor's established footprint in electrical safety and digital training, Apave takes a strategic step forward in the region. Together, we enable a more complete, scalable and integrated portfolio of training services for the energy sector, maritime industries and the rapidly expanding blue economy.
